

About Lisa

Lisa is an experienced cybercrime keynote speaker speaking around the world on cybercrime and social engineering. In 2019 Lisa won the Top 100 Women in Tech award.

Lisa began her career working in anti-piracy and Counter-terrorism intelligence researching online radicalisation and the risky social engineering process undertaken by terrorist recruiters.

She then moved into one of the UK Police Cyber-Crime Units where she got to know the attackers' mind sets and methodologies well. Almost all the cases involved social engineering.

Lisa formed Red Goat Cyber Security in 2017 with the goal of reflecting the techniques and methodologies being used by hackers. They provide GCHQ certified social engineering training, security testing and wargaming exercises to help organisations prepare for an attack.

"Lisa was one of the most popular and engaging speakers at TEISS 2019. Lacing humour and intrigue with her real case studies of social engineering, she certainly knows how to capture a room. We highly recommend her!"

TEISS

"Lisa not only knows her subject inside out, but has an incredible way of delivering her message in an engaging, thought provoking, intelligent and informative way. One that has the audience hooked and waiting for more. At every event Lisa has been involved in with me the audience can't get enough - the queues of delegates trying to speak to her at the end of the session speaks volumes!"

Digital Ship Conferences

"Lisa ran a highly entertaining workshop. The event was over-subscribed and received great feedback from our staff, who found it both fun and seriously thought-provoking. Lisa was a very engaging presenter and facilitator, and we will certainly be calling on her talents in the future to help us maintain awareness of the threat from cyber criminals"
